REPORT

Describe

Through my project, I learned profound truths about the transformative power of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Elder Dale G. Renlund's analogy of the Church as dynamite became even more meaningful as I witnessed how the gospel has shaped my family's life. My mother's conversion story reminded me of the incredible joy and change that come from embracing the light of Christ, similar to what King Lamoni experienced in Alma 19:6. The gospel's ability to dispel darkness and bring light is not just a story from scripture but a living truth. Reflecting on Alma 31:5, I understood more deeply how preaching the word of God not only changes individuals but strengthens families and communities. This project reinforced the idea that the gospel is not just a belief system but a force for transformation and eternal progression.

Define

Living this project allowed me to intentionally focus on the gospel and how it draws people closer to the Savior. As I listened to my mother share her story, I was reminded of the sacrifices my parents made to follow the truth they found in the gospel. My Mother had to sacrifice family relations, my Father suffered ridicule from family and friends for staying true to the gospel. This led me to reflect on my own conversion, helping me see the Savior's hand in my life. I also spent time studying scriptures and praying with more purpose, asking for guidance in how I can better live the principles I was learning. This process deepened my faith and helped me feel closer to the Savior. By focusing on gratitude for the gospel's blessings, I felt a renewed sense of purpose in striving to emulate His example in my daily actions.

Demonstrate

The results of this project have been both personal and spiritual. Sharing my mother's conversion story brought my family closer together, as we reflected on how the gospel has impacted each of our lives. It also allowed me to share this story with others, which I hope inspired my classmates to consider how the gospel has transformed their lives. As a next step, I want to focus on helping others feel the same joy by being more intentional in sharing my testimony and living the gospel daily. I want to help people remember what God has done for them and their parents much like the Nephites remembering how the Lord guided their fathers across the great ocean and the desert. This experience has shown me that small acts of faith can have a ripple effect, just as my parents' conversion has shaped my life. Moving forward, I plan to find more opportunities to share the gospel with others and continue strengthening my relationship with the Savior.
